PHILHARMONIC CONCERT GIVEN.

Cemar Franck Symphony Feature of the Programme.

The Philharmonic Society at its Friday afternon concert yesterday at Carnegie Hall presented a programme of music by romantic composers. There was no soloist, but it is probable that no loss on this account was felt, as a variety wholly sufficient was afforded in the interesting list of compositions given by the orchestra. It contained mo overtures, Spohr's, to his opera "Jessonda," and Weber's, to his "Euryan-the," and for larger works. Schubert's unfinished symphony in D minor.
